Advances in the artificial feeding of infants

● The introduction of dried milk simplified and increased the safety of artificial feeding and has had a notable influence on infant health during the feeding period. Since that day, more than 35 years ago, there have been three notable advances, all embodied in Ostermilk :

(a) the development of a 'humanised' formula, as that of Ostermilk No. 1,

(b) the addition of iron and vitamin D*, as in both Ostermilk No. 1 and No. 2,

(c) the reduced cost achieved in 1928 when means were found to halve the price of dried milk food without impairing quality.

Ostermilk is a roller-dried milk food of standardised composition ; it is bacteriologically safe and contains added iron and vitamin D. Ostermilk No. 1 with reduced fat and protein and an increased lactose content is suitable for infants up to three months ; Ostermilk No. 2 is a full cream food for older infants.

When breast-feeding fails, it can be safely supplemented with or replaced by Ostermilk.

Avoid Chilblains This Winter

SUCH SIMPLE PRECAUTIONS NEED BE TAKEN

Two capsules of Halycalcyne (Crookes Halibut Oil with Calcium Phosphate) twice daily after meals during the autumn and winter and Chilblains just will not appear.

When Halycalcyne has not been taken and this irritating and depressing condition does develop prescribe Halycalcyne at once and apply 'Collosol' Iodine Oil frequently to the affected area.

In this use of 'Collosol' Iodine Oil the advantages of colloidal therapy will be readily appreciated by the sufferer for a rapid and effective penetration of iodine is procured without staining, blistering or irritation.

A very "FINE" ANTACID

The speed and thoroughness with which an antacid acts depend to a great extent upon its technical perfection and the degree of fineness in which it is presented to the system. These features of a product cannot always be detected by the naked eye. You must make sure, therefore, that you use or recommend a brand which is of the highest quality. Maclean Brand Stomach Powder is "Fine" in the sense of being effective, because in addition to its excellent formula, it is uniquely "fine" in texture. Recommended for cases of Excessive Acidity, Flatulence, Heartburn, Nervous Dyspepsia and similar gastric disturbances.

what MILTON is . . .

4. NOT EUSOL★

Milton is not Eusol. Milton is prepared by the electrolysis of sodium chloride in solution, stabilised by a special process and standardised at 1% of sodium hypochlorite. It is non-irritant.

"Eusol B.P.C.," says an independent investigator, "is often incorrectly regarded as a sodium hypochlorite whereas it is really a solution of chlorinated lime buffered with boric acid. It is therefore no substitute for sodium hypochlorite and it is well known to possess irritant properties."

These facts have become widely recognised and accordingly Milton has replaced Eusol in many hospitals.

For unvarying strength and low alkalinity the choice is Milton—not Eusol.

DIPHENAN B.D.H.

For the Treatment of Threadworm Infestation

Diphenan has proved to be the most generally satisfactory anthelmintic for the treatment of threadworm infestation following its extensive use over a number of years.

Diphenan B.D.H. is characterised by the following properties :—

1 High degree of purity
2 Freedom from toxic effects (gastric, nervous and general)
3 Marked lethal effect on the parasite, Oxyuris vermicularis

It may be administered therefore to patients of all ages including infants. Untoward reactions are not to be expected, and, on the rare occasions on which they may be produced, they generally prove to be evanescent and disappear as the treatment is continued.

Successful treatment is assured, therefore, if adequate precautions are taken against reinfestation. This is perhaps the most difficult and exacting part of the treatment. Failure in this respect is usually the explanation of apparently totally intractable cases.

Diphenan B.D.H. is obtainable from the principal pharmacists.

Interesting Experiment

THE problem of wastage in the nursing profession has drawn attention to the need for careful selection of student nurses, and has centred interest on the best way of ensuring that candidates accepted for training are capable of undertaking the work and likely to make a success of it. The success of the various Services during the war in selecting the work which new recruits should be trained to do by means of intelligence, aptitude and other tests has attracted attention : the tests are designed to show whether the individual is capable of training for a certain trade or profession. In connection with this work, psychologists are responsible for drawing up suitable tests after studying the work which members of the profession are required to carry out. Special tests for example, show whether the individual is suited to mechanical work, deft hand work, and so on, and has the intelligence necessary to carry out the duties which the trained worker requires.

No work has been done in relation to nursing in this country beyond the using of intelligence tests by certain nurse training schools, in some cases before admission, as an aid to selection, in others, after entrance, as a matter of interest and guidance. In America, however, very interesting experiments have taken place during the war years, and a battery of tests designed for the purpose has been in increasing use since 1935 and has already proved very helpful. The testing has been done by the Psychological Corporation, of 522 Fifth Avenue, New York City. This Corporation has set up a special section for the purpose, the Testing Service Division for Schools of Nursing, directed by Miss Edith M. Potts, R.N., M.A. The tests are carried out either at the Corporation or by psychologists in various cities throughout the United States of America who are co-operating with the corporation in research projects. There were facilities for testing candidates for the nursing profession in 179 cities in 1941.

The Psychological Corporation in the first place carried out a job analysis to show what skills, aptitudes, intelligence, and personality traits are desirable in candidates for the nursing profession. On the basis of this analysis, the psychologists selected or drew up the different tests which they have used, and these have, we understand, been modified in the light of experience. For example, because the nurse has to understand the work she has to carry out, she must have a certain degree of intelligence, which is tested by a scholastic aptitude test : because she has to study anatomy, physiology, medicine and surgery, she must have the capacity to use language, and therefore her vocabulary is tested : because she must measure lotions and drugs, and calculate dosages, she must have some capacity for carrying out sums and solving arithmetical problems, so she has arithmetical tests : because she must carry out treatments and handle delicate apparatus, she should be deft and quick in hand-work and be able to see how to fit things together readily; she has tests for mechanical aptitude to see whether she is clumsy or clever in the use of her hands.

Because she has to handle people, and not inanimate things, the candidate's personality is also tested but, here, apart from the impression of personality by the interviewer, the results are less reliable. The candidate is asked to answer questions about herself and is marked according to the answers she gives : it is obviously difficult to answer absolutely honestly. The personality test can, at best, only give the individual's estimation of her own personality. However, the Corporation does consider that a personality test is an essential part of the testing process, and uses the Bernreuter test for the purpose.

So far the testing of nurses by the Psychological Corporation is not obligatory for all entrants to the profession, but individual hospitals can make it obligatory for their own candidates. By 1940, 199 schools of nursing had applied to have their candidates tested, and 9,233 applicants were tested ; these numbers have steadily increased. The method employed is that the head of the nursing school gives the candidate who applies a card to send to the Corporation or its representative. The candidate fills in and sends up the card, and the Corporation tells her when and where to attend for her test. The candidate pays her own fee for testing, which is about £1.

The Corporation holds tests at suitable intervals, but does arrange for individual tests if there is a good reason. The results are treated as confidential but a full report is sent to the head of the nursing school or schools to which she has applied, giving her actual scores in the tests and also showing how her scores compare with 10,000 other applicants for admission to schools of nursing, through ten grades from poor to average and very good. In addition the report gives a summary of special strengths or weaknesses which are apparent and of what her classwork, manual skills and personality adjustments seem likely to be. Finally they either recommend, conditionally recommend, or do not recommend, her for training, and estimate her chance of being able " to carry the course in a school of nursing".

Of what value are the tests ? In the first place they can definitely reduce wastage. Candidates who obtain low scores show a higher proportion of failure to qualify than candidates

H.M. Queen Elizabeth opened the new Queen Charlotte's Hospital, Goldhawk Road, W.6, on Tuesday, November 20; she is seen in the Dominions Ward.

Topical Notes

From Middlesex to Guy's

Miss D. M. Smith, O.B.E.

Miss Dorothy M. Smith, O.B.E., matron of Middlesex Hospital for 15 years, is to succeed Miss Emily E. P. MacManus O.B.E. when she retires from the matronship of Guy's Hospital, early in the New Year. Miss Smith is a Guy's trainee, so she will be returning to her alma mater, and there is no doubt that her wide experience will be invaluable to a hospital which has a vast rebuilding programme before it—partly as a result of war damage but also partly due to the fact that much of Guy's was already scheduled for rebuilding, for its foundations had twice had to be shored up before the war. Miss Smith has already had much to do with rebuilding schemes for, when she went to the Middlesex in 1929, the foundations of the new Nurses' Home had been laid, and it was finished, and then the various wings of the H-shaped building were pulled down, rebuilt one by one, and linked up, while the private patients' wing and the radium wing were re-adapted.

She has seen the main hospital grow from 368 beds plus 90 beds in the cancer wing to 750 beds. These are not all open yet, but there are still 200 beds at Northwood. The nursing staff had increased to 418 before the war and the school is famous for its high standard of nursing work. It was one of the first to have a three-month preliminary training school, and has set an example in the taking of nurses whose names are on supplementary parts of the Register as second year nurses.

The nurse training school has a long waiting list and this is perhaps partly due to the fact that Miss Smith has always encouraged school girls interested in nursing to come and see her. She interviews them and gives them advice as to how to spend the period which must elapse before they can begin their training, and finds that it is much more fruitful than telling them to wait "till they are older." Miss Smith is delighted that the hospital has agreed to give long service medals to all sisters after five years' service; the first were presented last week.

Miss Smith has done also a great deal of public work. She has been a member of the General Nursing Council since 1935 and its chairman since January, 1944; she is a member of the College Council, the P.M.R.A.F. Advisory Nursing Board, the Prison Advisory Nursing Board, the executive of the Hospital Matron's Association, of the National Council of Nurses of Great Britain. Miss MacManus, with her unusual qualities and charm, will not be easy to follow, but Guy's is lucky to have such a candidate at their command.

Miss G. V. Hillyers O.B.E., Retires

Miss G. V. L. Hillyers, O.B.E.

Miss Gladys V. L. Hillyers, O.B.E., S.R.N., S.C.M., Diploma of Nursing, University of London, matron of St. Thomas's Hospital and superintendent of the Nightingale Training School, retires this week after thirty-one years' service to the hospital, only broken by periods of post-graduate education and travel. Trained in the Nightingale School 1914-1917, Miss Hillyers obtained an honours certificate (gold medal standard). She held a number of appointments as charge nurse and sister, and then took the Sister Tutor Diploma, King's College of Social and Domestic Science and the Diploma of Nursing, University of London. She then became sister in charge of the Preliminary Training School, St. Thomas's Hospital in 1924, assistant matron in 1933, and matron in 1938, breaking her work to take up a Rockefeller Travelling Fellowship for the study of nursing education in the United States. In 1939, she was appointed matron, Number 8 Sector, London and Home Counties, Emergency Medical Service.

She has had a very difficult time, as St. Thomas's Hospital has suffered more damage than any other hospital being directly hit by 14 high explosive and one flying bomb, not to mention countless incendaries. In spite of the strain of the heavy responsibilities she carried, her courage and enthusiasm have never faltered: always beds have been made available as quickly as the essential services could be restored and in the country branches. Nothing we have seen during the war, was so inspiring as the orderly, efficient wards established in basements and repaired parts of the building just round the corner from scenes of utter destruction and chaos. Nowhere was the spirit 'London can take it' better put into deeds. And, behind it, has been Miss Hillyers, devotion to all that is best in nursing. She is a member of the Council of the Royal College of Nursing, the General Nursing Council, the Rushcliffe Committee, the Executive Committee of the Association of Hospital Matrons and the Queen Alexandra's Imperial Military Nursing Service Committee and Army Nursing Board; her public work for the nursing profession has been very valuable. She will be greatly missed at St. Thomas's, but will continue her public work for the time being. Trainees of the Nightingale School and other members of the staff presented her with a beautifully inscribed book and a cheque for £500 as a token of their appreciation before she left who obtain higher scores. Taking for example, the scholastic aptitude test, among 33 who obtained a score of 190 +, 85 per cent. qualified; among 337 who obtained a score of 170-179, 77 per cent. qualified; among 1912 who scored 130-139, 70 per cent qualified: yet among 374 who scored 100-109, only 57 per cent. graduated; among 59 who scored 80-89, only 32 per cent. qualified; among 10 who scored 60-69, only 20 per cent qualified. In other words among candidates in the upper intelligence groups the percentage which failed to qualify was between 15-30 per cent., whereas in the lower intelligence groups it was from 50 to 100 per cent.

Further the tests, if carried out early, may indicate a weakness which can be overcome before the student nurse begins her training. For example, weakness in arithmetic, slowness in reading or poor vocabulary can be corrected by appropriate study courses before she enters hospital and greatly improve the candidate's chance of success.

American experience shows that the schools which have used the tests find the results 'amazing,' 'very valuable,' of 'keen interest.' The number constantly increases and administrators find that it results in reduction of costs owing to the reduction of wastage. Could not the National Institute of Industrial Psychology do similar work for us here?

Back from Vienna

Miss Frances Rowe, Nursing Consultant to the Allied International Military Commission in Austria, returned to London this week from Vienna for a few days. She reports that the training of nurses was reduced to one and a half years by the Nazi authorities, and much political propaganda was taught to nurses in training. She has contacted some of the 'International Students' already and found that one had on her desk pine cones from Florence Nightingale's home at Embley Park, which she had picked up herself when she was there. They had helped to maintain her spirit during the long difficult years of Nazi domination.

Outstanding Heroism

So much of interest arose from the Minister of Health's press conference in connection with his vigorous recruitment campaign last week, that we omitted to mention one point which will give great satisfaction within the nursing profession. When the representatives of the press brought up the old story of the tyrannic matron and sister as the main cause of shortage and wastage of recruits, Mr. Aneurin Bevan without a moment's hesitation or prompting, paid a glowing tribute to the matrons of our hospitals. He spoke of the outstanding work which they had done during the war and the courage and heroism that they had shown during the air attacks over the war years. All nurses will be glad that this public acknowledgement was made by Mr. Bevan, for few can realize as well, the sense of responsibility which results from the care of persons who are confined to bed during air attacks. We feel that every matron should benefit by a break of at least two consecutive months' leave at the earliest opportunity.

Unjustified Criticisms

In spite of Mr. Bevan's intervention, however, and a generally good reception for the new code, there have been some ready to make the usual statements, based on the sensational reports of those who do not succeed and quite overlooking what Mr. Bevan himself accepted—the fact that many of the leading hospitals had all, or almost all, the conditions he advocated in force already. Yet Time and Tide says that the improvements are, of course, only being put forward under pressure of a dangerous shortage of staff. If Mr. Bevan's statement was a fair estimate of the truth and we scarcely feel he would wish to flatter the large voluntary hospitals, of which he does not apparently approve—this cannot also be a fair estimate: it is not helpful to the nursing profession. Again the Spectator speaks of "the form of personal and professional slavery which nursing has hitherto involved." These sweeping statements are unjustified, and do harm where help could be given and encouragement is needed.

The Queen at Queen Charlotte's

The official opening by the Queen, this week of Queen Charlotte's Maternity Hospital, W.6, brings to the notice of the public the thought and intelligence, to say nothing of the money and labour which have been spent on Britain's largest maternity hospital and midwifery training school. Miss E. G. Dare, matron, has brought ideas from hospitals she has visited in both Europe and America: the mothers are in six-bedded rooms—three rooms to a floor—in which curtains can be drawn to make a large cubicle round each bed and the mother can feed her baby undistracted by her neighbours; an important part of the educational scheme is that babies are bathed and changed in these rooms and the mother, by the time she goes home, instead of having seen one, perhaps, puzzling demonstration is thoroughly accustomed to her small child's daily ritual; on each floor is a special nursery suite containing a milk room, treatment room, and special room for premature babies; the sluice room, which is quite apart, contains a large steam sterilizer which is used for all the bed pans each day (each patient has her own bedpan).

The Eight Hour Shift

The labour wards are all together on one floor, nearby are the two-bedded waiting wards and a day room. The pupil midwife works for four months in the lying-in wards (two on day and two on night duty) before she goes into the labour ward and by this time she has a good grounding of knowledge and has had practice in tying cords and seeing deliveries. In these wards the pupils and trained staff work on an eight hour shift system (8—4—12) and change over every fortnight. It works well especially for the trained staff but the pupil midwife has to fit lectures and visits to clinics into her spare time. The new nurses' home is very comfortable and the cafeteria, for use by doctors and nurses alike—as are the smoking rooms outside—is a fine light, sunny hall with french windows. All in the hospital have the same menu—patients, porters, doctors and nurses. The hospital's 170 hens have served Britain's mothers well, having, in spite of lapses during the raids, produced 50,000 eggs during the war; everyone gets about two fresh eggs a week. The teaching quarters include a fair sized lecture room, a practical room and half a dozen small rooms for private study and writing: they would need to be enlarged if a preliminary training school were introduced. The pupil midwife's life is unhampered by rules and restrictions and the whole nurse's home is the most modern in the land—for it was built during the war.

The Queen and 'The Mikado'

The Queen and the two princesses visited St. Mary's Hospital, Paddington, on November 6, to see a performance of "The Mikado" given, in aid of the centenary fund, by nurses and students. The royal visitors were received by the Mayor and Mayoress of Paddington (Sir Frederick and Lady Lawrence), Lord Moran, the Dean of the hospital, Sir Alexander and Lady Fleming, and Miss M. G. Milne, matron. The medical school library had been converted into a theatre, and the Queen and the princesses sat in the front row. At the end of the performance they went on to the stage, where the principals were presented to them.

U.S. Health Services

President Truman has laid a health plan before Congress. The proposals include compulsory health insurance with free choice of doctor and hospital; disability insurance; Federal aid for the building of hospitals, health centres and the expansion of public health services and more adequate Federal aid to support professional education and research, particularly into the cause, prevention and cure of cancer and mental illness. Nurses will follow with interest the course of this programme which may be similar to the existing services over here.

An Opportunity and an Obligation

"The Council estimates that it requires 2,500 nurses and some 1,600 domestic workers this winter if it is to meet its obligations and we are anxious to fill these vacancies as soon as possible so that the sick may be adequately cared for," said Lord Latham, Leader of the London County Council, presiding at a Press conference on the subject of the Council's nursing recruitment drive, on November 16. He stressed that the nursing profession offered women a wide field of action not found elsewhere; the Council had a broad progressive outlook on staff questions, and welcomed the new code for hospital staff and domestic workers. The salary increases recommended would, of course, be adopted by the Council.

Restrictions Lifted

Following a meeting of the matrons of eight general (County) hospitals and two sanatoria in Kent, instriuctions have been issued withdrawing, in general, any restrictions which had been placed on the off-duty activities of nursing staff. This was reported by the County medical officer at the quarterly meeting of the Kent County Public Health Committee. There are two exceptions to the lifitng of restrictions. Student nurses who are under the age of eighteen must be back in hospital by midnight, while for student nurses in the Preliminary Training Schools the arrangement relating to late passes will continue. Apart from these, however, no restriction now exists in regard to the off-duty activities of nursing staff. Some parents may feel that young girls, who are studying hard, should be in bed before midnight. Others may wish for a little supervision.

DIET IN HEALTH*

By Mrs. E. M. LANG, Ministry of Food

Left : enjoying himself : a toddler should eat at regular times ; he should be trained to eat slowly and never forced to take food he does not eat with relish

WE are all interested in improving the health of the nation, and nothing will destroy it more quickly than incorrect feeding. There are certain groups of people in the population which require special attention in regard to diet, for example, the pregnant and lactating mother, the young child, the adolescent and the industrial worker. It is to these groups that I will devote most of my time.

NUTRITION DURING PREGNANCY AND LACTATION

A. Dietary Deficiency.—Recent investigations have shown the following effects of diet deficiency in human pregnancy :—

1. Dunham and Rector have shown that foetal rickets or rickets in the early weeks may result from lack of calcium, phosphorus, or vitamin D in the pre-natal period.

2. Calcification of the teeth of the young child (as shown by X-ray) depends on the nutrition and general physical condition of the mother.

3. Keratomalacia of both eyes at birth has been reported in a new born child of a mother deficient in vitamin A.

4. A severe type of anaemia in both mother and child due to dietary deficiency has been reported. This responds readily to yeast extract.

5. An experiment was carried out in Toronto in which 120 women living on poor diets and earning a low income were studied. A control group of 90 women on an equally poor diet were given milk, cheese, eggs, tomatoes, wheat germ and vitamin D capsules. The incidence of miscarriages, premature deaths, still-births and deaths before six months was much higher in the 120 cases who did not receive supplements. There was also marked increase in minor and major diseases in babies born of mothers in the first group.

6. Supplementary minerals and vitamins reduced toxaemia of pregnancy approximately 30 per cent. (People's League of Health.)

7. Some interesting work was done, in 1937, by the Birthday Trust Fund in co-operation with the Local Medical Officers of Health. Poor mothers were given each month :—1 pound of Ostermilk, half a pound of Ovaltine, and 4 ozs. of Marmite or some other yeast extract. Control groups received no supplement. This experiment was made in Rhondda Valley, Monmouth, Newcastle and Durham. The results were remarkable. There was a significant reduction of the infant death rate in favour of the Marmite, yeast extract group. Most marked results were shown in parts of the country where the mortality rate is high and nutritional standards are low. These results are set out in the following table published in the Proceedings of The Nutrition Society,

AREA	DEATHS		DIFFERENCE
	Control	Treated
RHONDDA ...	96	66	30
MONMOUTH ...	84	62	22
NEWCASTLE ...	71	56	15
DURHAM ...	63	55	8

B. Foods Needed During Pregnancy.—The mother needs increased quantities. Her calorie intake during the latter half of pregnancy should be 2,500 and during lactation, 3,000 a day. Observe that the calorie intake is not extremely high. It is quality rather than quantity that counts. Her protein intake should be 85-95 g. a day. A low protein intake results in : (a) lower haemoglobin and serum protein ; (b) higher incidence of pre-eclampsia ; (c) higher incidence of oedema ; (d) increased fatal mortality ; (e) poor calcium absorption. Her calcium intake during pregnancy should be 1.5 g. and during lactation 2.0. g. a day. Calcium is taken as follows :—

One quart of milk	1.4 g.
3 ozs. of national bread	0.012 g.
4 ozs. of cooked cabbage	0.048 g.
	1.460 g.

The lactating mother must increase this by eating more bread, vegetables and cheese. Her iron intake should be 15-18 mg. a day. Unfortunately many mothers enter pregnancy with a lowered haemoglobin percentage—often 24-25 per cent. below 70 per cent. The sources of iron are egg yolk, organ meats, dried peas and beans, green vegetables, cheese, prunes, raisins, soya beans and whole grains.

In regions where goitre is endemic the increased strain of pregnancy may result in iodine deficiency symptoms in child, mother, or both.

Vitamins must all be increased during pregnancy. Supplements of vitamins A and D should be given during the second and third trimesters of pregnancy as plasma vitamin A decreases. It has been suggested with regard to vitamin B that the requirement of thiamin increases threefold in the latter part of pregnancy. When sufficient is given, many of the minor aches, pains and complaints will disappear and the patients attitude will change from one of apathy to one of interest. The ascorbic acid (vitamin C) requirement is increased but can be met by use of orange juice supplement and green vegetables. The mother needs 400-800 international units of vitamin D daily, depending on the climate etcetera. The use of halibut oil or cod liver oil is essential. Haemorrhagic diseases of the newborn child can be prevented by either giving vitamin K to the mother by mouth for two weeks before delivery or parenterally at the onset of labour. Vitamin K occurs in hemp seed, soya beans cereal grasses and hog liver fat.

THE FEEDING OF THE CHILD

Having discussed the diet of the mother I should like to pass on to the feeding of her child. It is not necessary to stress, to this audience, the importance of breast feeding whenever possible. As you know, milk is our most nearly perfect food, but even milk is deficient in some important dietary factors such as vitamins C, D, B and iron, this reason it is necessary to supplement the child's milk feeds at an early age.

Supplementary Feeding of Infants

The supplementary feeding of young children should be carried out at the following ages and using a spoon from the beginning.

(1) At two weeks.—Begin giving cod liver oil, starting with very little and increasing to one teaspoon daily.

(2). At one month.—Begin giving orange juice giving at one to six months one teapoonsful twice and at six months to five years one teaspoonful three times a day.

(3) At four months.—Begin giving cooked egg yolk (which contains vitamin B_1 and Fe), mixed according to formula or as simple custard.

(4) At five to six months.—Begin giving well cooked, finely sieved vegetables such as tomatoes, spinach, peas, carrots, string beans, etc. When these are well taken start giving fruit such as prunes, apples, peaches, apricots, etc.

(5) At six to seven months.—Begin giving sieved cereal and sieved boiled liver, not exceeding 2 ozs. There is no hurry about this, fruit and vegetables are more important.

(6) At eight to ten months.—Begin giving fruit and vegetables twice daily ; add steamed fish, mashed potato and half a slice of toast or a cream cracker. Begin to offer a food that is mashed or chopped not sieved.

(7) At ten months.—Give the same foods in larger quantities, for example, three to four oz. helpings and a whole egg.

(8) After twelve months.—Give scraped or ground meat several times per week.

The Feeding of Toddlers

The feeding of toddlers, aged from one to five years, needs special consideration. The allocation of priority eggs has recently been extended to include children from six months to two years. There are six points to remember with regard to meals :—1. give three meals per day at regular hours ; 2. do not give snacks or sweets between meals ; 3. do not force feeds ; 4. teach the child to chew and eat slowly ; 5. the last meal should be small and not sweet ; 6. give water and fruit juice between meals.

The meals should contain milk, cheese (mild, grated), soups, meat, egg or fish (daily), vegetables (daily after six months), fruit (with no skins or seeds). Avoid too many puddings, do not give pastry, give starch in the form of whole grain or national bread, plain biscuits, rusks, scones, sponge cakes and some milk puddings.

Meals for the School Child

Children of school age, because of their great activity require a large calorie intake ; owing to rapid growth they need a diet high in protein values and minerals ; the vitamin intake must be proportionately high and should be influenced by calorie intake, activity and growth. " Normal standards " are not fixed ; it is a mistake to depend on standards too much. Benedict and Talbot state that the child does not as a rule get enough to eat. Sherman says that superior development and improved growth and vigour are achieved by suitable additions to an already " adequate diet."

Proof of these two statements is shown by the fact that some children attending boarding school only grow during holidays.

The school child's diet should consist of proteins, carbohydrates, fat, vitamins and minerals. In calories, the proportion should be : carbohydrates, 50 per cent., protein, 15 per cent. and fat 35 per cent. He needs plenty of both first and second class proteins. Carbohydrate, which is necessary for energy and for the utilization of fat, should be given in the form of bread, milk, potatoes, cereals and green vegetables for they contain vitamins and minerals which form a protection against infection. Only a small part should be given as sugars and syrups. Fat brings up the calorie value of the diet with little bulk, it is also frequently a carrier of vitamins A and D and a small amount of fatty acids are necessary to growth.

Industrial Workers

War-time and rationing have imposed so many restrictions that we should study the proper selection of food stuffs for our industrial workers with great care. It has been found that, even though a diet may appear to be adequate, if variety is lacking we begin to notice a decline in the fitness of the individual. This monotony of diet is very prevalent among industrial workers.

The packet lunch is the black spot in modern industry. In order to find out its effects on the worker several factories co-operated with the Ministry of Food in carrying out an experiment. Volunteers from a cross section of factory workers were divided into two groups, those that ate canteen meals and those that carried their lunch. Both groups were weighed at regular intervals. Where the workers were taking advantage of the canteen there was no weight loss and in many cases decided weight gains. In the group that carried their lunch 23 per cent. of the younger women, 7 per cent. of the young men, and 26 per cent. of the older men showed weight loss.* If workers use the canteen it means that their rations are available for the meals they eat at home. The fat ration will not run to daily sandwiches and so it also means that in many cases the housewife sacrifices hers. A heavy worker does not require more protein than a sedentary worker and should not receive more than his share of meat and cheese rations.

Finally with regard to vitamin concentrates, they are very valuable substances and I do not want anyone to under estimate their importance. But for the average individual the vitamins should be given, not as pure synthetic drugs, but in foods rich in vitamins, for these foods also contain other natural substances. To give a concentrated vitamin to a semi-starving individual might cause definite harm. Milk, cheese, organ meats, whole grains, vegetables and yeast are cheaper, less dangerous, more satisfying and more palatable.

In the second edition of this book the accounts given of some of the tests are improved by the inclusion of a little more detail, for example, in describing gastroscopy and the test for occult blood. Additional subjects mentioned are sternal puncture, the Rhesus factor, mass miniature radiography, and the pathological investigations required during treatment with penicillin. Some of the directions given with regard to the nurse's part in ensuring a true finding in the laboratory are rather inadequate. For example, there is no mention of the fact that the results of a gastric analysis, some consider, can be invalidated if a patient is allowed to swallow his saliva during the 2½ hours in which specimens are collected—and the author recommends that salt should be added to the gruel, though all would not agree.

PRACTICAL NURSING INCLUDING HYGIENE AND DIETETICS.—By W. T. Gordon Pugh, M.D., B.S.(Lond.), F.R.C.S.(Eng.) and Alice M. Pugh, S.R.N. (William Blackwood and Sons, Limited, 1, Bateman Buildings, Soho Square, W.1; price 15s.)

The new edition of this standard work contains a few additions that bring it up-to-date, notably the technique of bone marrow infusion, in the treatment of shock, the uses of penicillin and the sulphonamides in overcoming infection, and a reference to the newer inhalation anaesthetics, such as divinyl ether and trichlorethylene. Mention is made of the oiling of ward floors and bedclothes in the prevention of hospital infection, and of DDT in the destruction of insects. A summary of the recommendations regarding the rehabilitation of the sick and injured, as given in the memorandum issued by the Ministry of Health in January, 1944, is included in an early chapter, with a list of the various activities commonly employed at different stages of rehabilitation.

An appendix gives all the questions set in examinations by the General Nursing Council, in subjects other than anatomy and physiology, since October, 1940. Those set at earlier examinations appear in the body of the book, as before, at the conclusion of the subject matter to which they refer.

SPECIAL TESTS USED IN TUBERCULOSIS

By OLIVE V. BUXTON, S.R.N.,
Tuberculosis Association and Sister Tutor Certificates

Left : applying a patch of material impregnated with tuberculin to a child : a red raised area within 48 hours indicates a positive reaction

THE following tests are commonly used in the diagnosis of or treatment of tuberculosis in its various forms, and all nurses in hospitals and sanatoria should be familiar with them.

Tuberculin skin tests, and the measurement of blood sedimentation rate and vital capacity, may be carried out, and results obtained in the wards or out-patient department, while other tests are performed in the pathological laboratory. With regard to the latter, the nurse should understand how to obtain the specimen and have some idea as to what happens to it in the laboratory and what results may be expected. All laboratory specimens should be clearly labelled with the patient's name (surname and initials), the ward, date, nature of the specimen and examination required, as follows :—

SMITH, A. B., Ward 3. 8/9/45.
Pleural fluid.
Examination required: tubercle bacilli and other organisms.

1. Tuberculin Skin Tests

Skin tests may be said to be of value only in a 'negative' way. A 'positive' reaction indicates that the person has or has had some tuberculous infection : most people have been exposed to such an infection at some time or other, therefore a positive result is quite usual. If a person is 'negative' it means that he has never been even slightly infected and therefore has no acquired immunity. It is not considered advisable for a 'negative' person to work among tuberculous people. The following tests are carried out :—

(a) Mantoux test.—In this test 1/10 c.c. of tuberculin 1 in 10,000 is injected intra-dermally, a 'control' being used elsewhere. If a red area appears at the site of injection within 48 hours, the result is positive : should it be negative, a slightly stronger solution may be tried.

(b) Mantoux patch test.—This test is used mainly in children; a patch of material impregnated with tuberculin is stuck on to the skin where the child cannot reach to scratch it off ; a positive reaction will show within 48 hours as a red raised area. This test is not as reliable as the intra-dermal injection of the Mantoux test.

(c) Von-Pirquet test.—In this test the arm is scarified (scratched) and a small quantity of tuberculin rubbed in—a 'control' of some harmless fluid is used on a separate scarified area. Redness on the first site indicates a positive reaction.

2. Sputum Tests

To carry out sputum tests the patient is given a sterile glass container which has a well fitting cork ; he is instructed to expectorate into this on waking in the morning. (If the sputum is scanty, a glass jar is kept by the patient for 24 hours and into this he expectorates all the sputum he can produce—this method is preferred by some doctors and in many sanatoria it is done as routine for any new patient). The following sputum tests may be made :—

(a) Direct smear test.—For this test the container is sent to the laboratory. The technician picks up a small amount of the viscid part of the sputum with a sterilized platinum wire loop and smears it thinly over a glass slide. It is then stained, using the Ziehl-Neelsen technique, as follows :—(i) hot carbol fuuhsin (a red dye) is poured over the slide and allowed to remain without cooling for 5 minutes ; (ii) the slide is washed in running water ; (iii) 20 per cent. sulphuric acid is poured over the slide and allowed to remain for 2 minutes.; (iv) the slide is washed in running water ; (v) the slide is immersed in 70 per cent. alchohol for 3 minutes ; (vi) the slide is washed in running water. The tubercle bacillus is acid and alcohol-fast, therefore to distinguish it from other non-acid-fast organisms which may be present, the slide is counter-stained, usually with methylene blue. It is then examined under the microscope ; if tubercle bacilli are present they will be seen as minute red rods whereas other organisms and cells will appear blue.

(b) Centrifuged deposit test.—This is sometimes used if the sputum is scanty or a direct smear examination has proved negative; the sputum is mixed with antiformin in a test-tube and the tube placed vertically in a centrifuge machine, the machine is then set in motion and the heavier part of the specimen sinks to the bottom leaving mucus and saliva at the top. This centrifuged deposit is then examined by the method described above.

(c) Culture test.—This is the most reliable test : if the direct smear test or the direct smear and centrifugal deposit tests have proved negative, it does not necessarily mean that tubercle bacilli are not present ; they may be few in number and not visible in every specimen examined by the direct method, therefore the sputum is 'cultured.' The 'culture medium' on which tubercle bacilli will grow is Lewinstein's medium (a modified and improved form of Dorset's egg medium), a thin layer of sputum is spread over a 'slope' of the medium in a test-tube and incubated at 37° Centigrade, after secondary organisms have been destroyed. The tubercle bacillus grows very slowly and it may be weeks before colonies appear ; these consist of yellowish-white spots which are examined microscopically to determine the exact nature of the organism.

3. Urine Tests

To test the urine a 24-hour specimen is collected and either the whole amount or the deposit left in the specimen glass after standing sent to the laboratory. Some of the deposit is centrifuged and 'fixed' on a slide and stained by the Ziehl-Neelsen method. The smegma bacillus in urine is liable to be confused with the tubercle bacillus, therefore the majority of laboratories prefer to use culture and/or the guinea-pig test to obtain a reliable result. For the latter test, some of the urine is injected into a guinea-pig ; the animal is killed (if it does not die) some weeks later, and if tuberculosis is found it is established that the urine contained tubercle bacilli.

4. Faeces Test

Tubercle bacilli may be found in the stools in cases of tuberculous intestinal ulceration or from swallowed sputum in pulmonary tuberculosis. A special jar with a spoon attached to the cork is commonly used. The nurse should take care that the stool has been passed into a clean bed-pan and that the spoon touches nothing but the faeces when picking up the specimen. The specimen is sent to the laboratory and examined in the usual way.

5. Pleural Fluid Test

A specimen of pleural fluid is drawn off by means of a syringe and aspirating needle, using strict aseptic technique. It is sent to the laboratory in a sterile tube and examined by the Ziehl-Neelsen method. The fluid may be a clear, straw colour, greenish, blood-stained, or thick and purulent. In a case of pleurisy in which tuberculosis is suspected but where no tubercle bacilli have been found on direct smear, a culture or the guinea-pig test may be used.

6. Blood Sedimentation Rate Test

The blood sedimentation rate test is more correctly termed erythrocyte sedimentation rate, and it indicates the rate at which the blood-cells fall in a vertical column of whole blood. There are several different methods ; the Westergren method will be described here. The test may be carried out by the doctor, or in some sanatoria, by the sister or a senior nurse.

A 2 c.c. hypodermic syringe with a sharp, fine needle is used ; 0.4 c.c. of sodium citrate, 3.8 per cent. solution is drawn up into the syringe. (If the sodium citrate solution is contained in a rubber-capped bottle, a separate needle should be kept for insertion into this, as rubber will blunt the needle). The patient is instructed to grip the upper arm firmly with the fingers of the other hand, or an assistant can apply the pressure ; the veins will then become prominent ; the skin is cleansed with methylated ether or spirit and the needle (attached to the syringe) is inserted into one of the veins, commonly the median basilic, and 1.6 c.c. of blood is drawn up into the syringe ; the pressure on the arm must be released before the needle is withdrawn, otherwise a haematoma will result. A spirit swab is placed on the puncture and the patient flexes his arm for a few moments to stop the bleeding. The needle is disconnected from the syringe and the mixture of blood and sodium citrate squirted into a glass tube and shaken gently. From this, blood is drawn up to the " O " mark on a graduated 200 mm. glass tube which is placed vertically in a special stand ; the tube is kept in position by a rubber cork at the bottom and a metal clip at the top. The time is noted, and exactly one hour later the column of plasma left at the top of the tube is measured. For example, supposing the cells have fallen to the 20 mm. mark, then the column of plasma measures 20 mm. and 20 is the blood sedimentation rate for that patient. The normal rate for men is under 6 mm. in one hour, and for women under 10 mm. Some doctors like a further reading taken after the next hour.

This test is not specific for tuberculosis and therefore has no particular value in diagnosis. The rate may be increased in other diseases and temporarily in the presence of even a mild infection such as a ' cold ' or any septic focus, but it is valuable as a check on the progress of a tuberculous patient if it is carried out at regular intervals and all other findings are taken into consideration with it. Menstruation may affect the rate, therefore the test should not be performed on women during that period. In acute or advanced cases of tuberculosis the cells may fall very rapidly and the reading be as much as 100 m.m. or more in the first hour.

7. Vital Capacity Test

This test is used particularly pre-operatively and post-operatively to determine the capacity of a patient's lungs. The patient takes a deep breath and blows out as hard as he can into a large rubber tube attached to a spirometer. A gauge connected to the machine shows the amount of air which has been expired. The vital capacity varies enormously with different patients according to the size of the thorax, general physique, amount of lung disease present, etc. It may be as low as a few hundred c.c. or as high as 4,000 c.c. This test may be of great assistance to the doctor, indicating the progress of the patient, if it is carried out regularly.

8. Cerebro-Spinal Fluid Test

Cerebro-spinal fluid is obtained by lumbar puncture performed by the doctor. The fluid is received into a sterile tube and sent to the laboratory. The nurse prepares a trolley as follows :—On the top shelf : sterile bowls, swabs and towels, methylated ether and iodine, sterile water, a 2 c.c. hypodermic syringe and needles, local anaesthetic, special lumbar puncture needle and rubber-tubing with a graduated glass tube or special manometer ; On the lower shelf : receiver for dirty swabs. The procedure is then as follows : the nurse places the patient in the lateral position on the edge of the bed, with knees drawn up and head down so that the lumbar spine is in the correct prominent position. The doctor cleanses the skin and places the towels in position ; he then introduces the local anaesthetic between two of the lumbar vertebrae below the level of the spinal cord ; the lumbar puncture needle is pushed through the anaesthetised area into the theca (sub-arachnoid space) ; cerebro-spinal fluid will flow out through the needle into a test tube which the nurse should hold in position, she replaces the cork as soon as the specimen has been collected. The doctor measures the pressure of the fluid by means of the graduated glass tube; he then removes the needle, cleanses the skin and seals the puncture with collodion.

It is advisable for the patient to lie flat in bed for some hours afterwards to prevent the occurrence of headache ; the foot of the bed may be raised on blocks.

In normal cerebro-spinal fluid the pressure is found to be about 100 m.m. whereas in tuberculous meningitis it is raised to 200 or more. Also in this condition the chloride content is low, and the number of lymphocytes is increased ; on standing, a ' spider-web ' clot usually forms ; the fluid when fresh is often clear. In some cases, tubercle bacilli may be found in the fluid but the above findings are conclusive evidence of tuberculous meningitis.

TOWARDS BETTER HEALTH

" School Medical Service," the circular issued by the Department of Health for Scotland and the Scottish Education Department (D.H.S. circular No. 147/1945 : S.E.D. circular No. 45/1945) brings to the notice of the various authorities the wider obligations arising from the Education (Scotland) Act, 1945. These obligations include, arrangements for the medical inspection of all pupils under 18 and the inspection, by medical officers, of schools—especially in regard to lighting, heating ventilation and sanitary arrangements. Education authorities have also been specifically empowered to provide a child guidance service. The new Act gives wider powers to these authorities to ensure cleanliness of children's bodies and clothing; for example, hitherto a separate authorization has been necessary for the examination of each individual child. this is no longer necessary : penalties for allowing children to become re-infested are increased and a child may be excluded from school until after cleansing. The Secretary of State for Scotland, after consideration and consultation, will make regulations regarding the school medical service, but in the meantime he asks education authorities to review the existing medical services and, where necessary and practicable, to extend their existing arrangements, including those with consultants and hospitals. Here is the opportunity for school nurses to put forward their ideas for improving a service of which they are a vital part.

Films in Brief

Marie-Louise

A striking and human example of a film in which there is no atmosphere of absurd unreality. Apart from the subject—child evacuation from Rouen to Switzerland—the story and characters have a truth and simplicity which give them lasting value.

Love Letters

A mangled version of Chris Massie's novel, with a cast of very American " English " folk—the English " homes " are not very convincing either !

The Seventh Veil

This film bridges the gap between psychological textbooks and over-emotionalized films. There are moments when one fears that Hollywood may prevail but they are successfully by-passed : its clean yet tender outlook on difficult problems is all the more telling because any definite propaganda is left to the heart and mind of the beholder.

The scheme of training for the first year, after two months in the preliminary training school, consists of four months at St. Thomas's Hospital, Hydestile; six months at St. Thomas's Hospital, London, and then two months at St. Thomas's Hospital, Hydestile. During the year the nurses work for two-monthly periods in the general, children's, and gynaecological wards; they do no night duty nor do they work in the special departments.

When the nurses are at Hydestile, during the first four and last two months of their first year, they have one "block-day" a week. While they are in London, they have one lecture a week which may take the form of a visit to a department, for example, a visit to the ear, nose and throat department after they have had a lecture during the previous week on diseases of the upper respiratory tract.

Theoretical work consists mainly of nursing lectures and demonstrations and is followed in the second and third years by lectures on applied anatomy and physiology, gynaecology, surgery, medicine and special diseases given by the medical staff.

THEORY AND PRACTICE—

The Ward Sisters' One Day Conference at the Royal College of Nursing

Miss J. de Pinto

LAST week Miss B. H. Renton's and Miss M. B. Powell's speeches at the afternoon Conference on "The Ward Sister and the Horder Report on Education and Training" were published. Miss J. de Pinto was the next speaker.

"We are here to-day," she began, "to consider the ward sister and the Horder Report. Let me say straight away that it is impossible to discuss the ward or departmental sisters, their position, their duties, or their responsibilities without also talking about the trained staff who hold the administrative positions; and the student nurses on whom the future of the nursing profession depends.

"Since 1932 we have had a series of reports dealing with all aspects of hospital life: the Lancet commission in 1932, the Athlone Committee in 1938, the Rushcliffe Report in 1943 and the Horder Report in 1943. All of these have made helpful suggestions but unfortunately few of their recommendations have come into effect, partly due to the six years of war, but as the medical profession has continued to make great progress during the war and valuable new drugs have been rapidly developed, we must not allow the reason of war to excuse our lack of progress.

An Omission

"Our thanks are due to the members of the Horder Committee for the valuable work which they have performed. I hope you have all read this report. It contains facts and suggestions that are bound to interest everyone who is here to-day. But let me warn those who have not yet read it, that when you do you will be shocked to see the few meagre lines that are devoted to the interests of the ward sister. Right at the beginning we find a precise and accurate description of the terms "registered nurse," "student nurse" and "assistant nurse." We do not require a definition of the sister tutor as she has a recognised qualification. The ward sister and the departmental sister are not described at all. No reference whatsoever is made to the age, qualifications and experience required of the professional woman who is the key to the efficiency of the medical or surgical team.

An Important Part

The departmental sister is not mentioned in the Horder Report, yet these senior sisters play a very important part in the training of student nurses, and in the co-ordination of work in the various departments. I speak as the night superintendent of a large county hospital with a staff of six night sisters. In this position I meet the sisters and nurses on one hand, and the administrative staff on the other, and so I am privileged to see the points of view of all members of the nursing staff.

"The term departmental sister varies in meaning from one hospital to another, but usually includes the theatre sister, the out-patient department sister, the senior night sister and the home sister. All these graduate from the rank of ward sister, and therefore let us consider the position of the ward sister first.

"Paragraph 47 is the only one devoted entirely to the ward sister and useful points to be noted are that she must be 'knowledgeable and able to teach.' But she is to acquire these assets in undefined three months' courses, as opposed to the twelve months' course undertaken by potential sister tutors. I would suggest that no nurse should be appointed to the position of ward sister within two years of State-registration, one of these years to be spent in post-graduate training and one year as a staff nurse This would have the double advantage of assuring a continual supply of staff nurses, and the newly appointed sister would have a wider and more balanced outlook. Let us hope that in the future no nurse will be appointed a sister before the age of 25 years.

"As a departmental sister I wish to be sure that the sisters coming under my supervision should be regarded as 'practical tutors' who can teach the student nurse to put an intelligent interpretation on her work. Any young girl can be taught to carry out nursing procedures in a mechanical way. She will not, however, understand the implications of what she is doing.

The Home Sister

"In the other groups of departmental sisters, the position of the theatre sister and out-patients' sister bring their own responsibilities and a high standard of work. The remaining category that I previously mentioned, is that of home sister. I personally hope that this post may be abolished in the near future. Student nurses should, like other students, be accommodated in a hostel under the care of a warden. Trained staff should have the opportunity of being non-resident.

"The recommendations of the Horder Report on the education and training of student nurses are to be welcomed. But I would draw your attention to the first paragraph on page 57 which reads: 'In recognition of the value of the training received and in anticipation of a salary when qualified which befits the status of a professional woman, she (the student nurse) is prepared to forego a high rate of remuneration in her student period.' The operative words in that paragraph are 'the status of a professional woman.' How many of us in the position of a ward or departmental sister, are accorded that status? Surely it is a short-sighted policy to pursue the improvements in conditions for student nurses, when they can see for themselves that the position of ward sister has received little recognition.*

Definition Needed

"Speaking as a departmental sister, I wish to recommend that the Horder Committee should incorporate into a future report, a definite statement regarding the status and prerogatives of both ward and departmental sisters. I want the future candidates for my own and similar posts, to have had happy years as a ward sister, during which they have been encouraged by their matrons to attend lectures, meetings and post-graduate courses. For only when we have completely changed the outlook of many of our senior members, can we say to prospective student nurses: 'Come and join our ranks—this is a wonderful profession and its standards and conditions are fully acceptable to the young woman of the twentieth century.'"

The last speaker from the platform was Miss Scales.

"The Horder Report," she began, "has given tremendous opportunity to those interested in, and responsible for, nurse education. It has given us the aims of nurse education to-day, and has suggested the methods by which these aims may be achieved.

"The ward sister, welcomes the report for the following reasons: She sees in it a bettered nursing service for patients. She also sees the studentship of the nurse in training defined and suggestions made as to the safeguarding of her position, such as, the idea that the staffing of hospitals and the training of nurses be considered as two separate problems.

The Linch Pin

"The report supports the principle of a basic general training, revised and widened, in which nursing schools are improved and have a greater similarity. The ward sister agrees with this and also that there should be a sound general training before training for the Supplementary Parts of the Register: This would reduce the strain on the nurse and the ward in which she works—and here may I make a plea for labour saving gadgets in the wards. Improved education on the lines of the block system is largely dependent on improved conditions in the wards. The ward sister appreciates very much what has been said about her as being the 'linch pin of the whole scheme.' She is harassed, however, due to conditions which are not her normal responsibilities, and these conditions are often even worse if she is not working in a modern ward.

The Ward Sisters' Reactions

"The ward sister was not represented on the Horder Committee, and although nurses are largely trained in the wards, her influence and contribution is not sufficiently felt. While the science of nursing is well catered for in the report, the art of nursing is not so well catered for. This is a part of nurse education and is largely the ward sister's responsibility. The ward sister's outlook is essential for giving this conception to the student nurses. To obtain a really balanced nurse education, the ward sisters contribution should be sought, and a greater analysis made of ward environment, and the service it offers.

"A word about the education of the ward sister: special courses are recommended; these should be adequate. Nurse education at its best will be achieved only when the position of the ward sister appears as a happy, satisfying, full-time career. Post-certificate courses should be designed to help her and to safeguard her status (Applause). At present, the ward sister is an unqualified though a unique teacher.

"The ward sister should have representation on training unit committees and on the reconstituted General Nursing Council, to be composed of nurse experts engaged in all forms of teaching. I hope the qualified ward sister will be eligible for more places than the report suggests—10 matrons, 6 sister tutors and only 2 ward or departmental sisters. The report mentions examiners, 'actively engaged in nursing and in touch with modern methods.' Surely sisters are most eligible: ward sisters are constantly being kept alive to standards and examining in their own wards.

Clinical Teaching

"There are debatable points arising under the heading 'Periods in the Wards,' for there are suggestions of classes over and above the block system. We must also remember the value of unbroken service to the nurse as well as to the patient. We endorse the suggestion of informal clinical classes taken by the ward sister, but there should be no set number. The student nurse should sometimes accompany the doctor on his rounds but not always; she has a great deal to learn and he is not always teaching just what is required. Nurses should be especially catered for: excessive class teaching may occur in the ward and the value of ward atmosphere and practical work in the education of the nurse be lost sight of. We do not want to be tarred with the class-room brush; our aim in ward teaching is the release and application of knowledge for the service of the patient.

"The ward sisters take up the challenge of the Horder Report and long to hold their responsibilities; they feel that an understanding of the points of view of both the sister tutors and the ward sisters will give an opportunity for real co-operation and result in the success of the Horder recommendations."

DISCUSSION

"I do not remember," Lord Horder said from the chair, "four more cogent and apposite papers on the subject—and I am a good judge. . . . I cannot, however, let Miss de Pinto's challenge go without comment—paragraph 47 of the report 'Education and Training' is long and perhaps she did not read it; it says, 'if the nurse teacher is the link between the classroom and ward, the ward sister is most certainly the linch pin of the whole scheme.' But, he continued, the ship was more than the crew, and no one individual—however much a key person—was going to say 'this is my technique and I do not care how anyone else does it.' With regard to the link between ward and classroom, surely it was really the student herself who formed the link.

Mr. L. E. Norbury, who came to represent the Royal College of Surgeons, spoke of the great interest he had found at the meeting, particularly as members of the Council of the Royal College of Surgeons had debated the previous day, at the instigation of the National Advisory Council for the Recruitment and Distribution of Nurses and Midwives, the very points that had arisen. "Particularly," he said, "they had discussed the need for greater facilities of transfer from one school to another and credit given for lectures the student had attended even if they were not quite similar." Mr. Norbury spoke, also, of the need for practical training. "We think," he said, "the work in the wards should go hand in hand with the classes outside—not divorced but correlated. The ward sister is important and should undertake teaching duties to a large extent; the sister tutor is, of course, an extremely valuable person, but the ward sister should have more stress than in the past." He ended on a personal note, recalling when as a new house surgeon, and not knowing quite everything, the ward sister had been able to tell him exactly how Mr. —— liked his patients treated.

Mrs. Mackenzie was the next speaker. She said how impressed she had been by the various contributions to construction and progress. Two things, however, had shocked her. "First," she said, "nursing education tends to lag behind general education." This was particularly apparent, she thought, in the remarks concerning the home sister; the tendency, to-day, in university education, was to make residence in hostels compulsory for all students.

"Secondly", she said, "I implore you to take seriously the question of examinations. I entirely agree that the ward sister's function as an examiner is a brilliant and important suggestion, but examining is an art not to be learnt without considerably study an dunder competent instruction. Further, the nursing profession to-day is suffering from bad examining."

Miss L. L. Payne, matron, Claybury Hospital, Woodford Bridge, spoke of her interest in the speeches and her concern in the training of mental nurses which she was anxious to bring up to date..

Miss D. Annakin, deputy matron, Whipps Cross Hospital, E.11, said she would take back many good words and subjects for discussion for the ward sisters in her hospital. Miss Richards, formerly sister, Glasgow Royal Infirmary and at present taking the course for administrators, said how strongly she felt that the greater proportion of the trained staff in average hospitals being ward and departmental sisters, they should contribute more to the nurses' training. To do this they would have to learn to think clearly and to put their thoughts into appreciable words so that they might have a hearing.

Miss M. Scott, of Guy's Hospital, proposed, and Miss M. A. Dawson, sister, Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital, Stanmore, and chairman of the Group in the London Branch, seconded a resolution asking Council to give further consideration to the formation of a ward and departmental sisters' section. The resolution passed unanimously and Miss Ayres-Brown, sister, of Addenbrooke's Hospital, and chairman of the Group in the Cambridge Branch, proposed, and Miss M. A. Dawson seconded, votes of thanks to the speakers.

MEDICINE AND MEDICAL NURSING TREATMENT

QUESTION 1.—State briefly what you know about : (a) tachycardia; (b) mitral stenosis; (c) ascites; (d) herpes zoster (shingles); (e) the uses and methods of administration of mersalyl (salyrgan or neptal).

Tachycardia.—This is increased frequency of the cardiac contractions. The pulse is rapid and regular. The condition may be temporary, "paroxysmal," or prolonged and is due to a variety of causes. Tachycardia is a normal response of the heart to exercise, or it may be produced by emotions such as fear and excitement or be caused by indigestion or over-smoking. In prolonged cases it may be due to toxins affecting the heart muscle as in many febrile conditions but, particularly, acute rheumatic fever: and as a result of increased metabolism as in thyrotoxicosis. When the blood pressure is low, increased frequency of contractions should occur, as in shock and haemorrhage, and if the oxygen content of the blood is diminished, as in anaemia, an increase of carbon dioxide in the blood stream or poisoning by carbon monoxide will also cause it. The cause of "paroxysmal tachycardia" is frequently undiscovered.

Mitral Stenosis.—This is the narrowing of the orifice between the left auricle and ventricle of the heart owing to contraction and scaring of the two cusps of the mitral valve. It is usually the result of endocarditis which frequently occurs in young people suffering from acute rheumatic fever or scarlet fever. No symptoms will be noticed by the patient while cardiac compensation is adequate but after a varying period of years auricular fibrillation often occurs and eventually congestive heart failure will develop.

Ascites.—This is distension of the peritoneal cavity by serous fluid which is usually the result of obstruction of the venous or lymphatic drainage of the abdominal cavity. The condition is frequently found in cases of generalized oedema, for example, congestive heart failure or chronic nephrosis; or it may be the result of local disease such as tuberculous peritonitis, malignant disease, or an ovarian cyst, or obstruction of the portal system from cirrhosis of the liver. The condition may be relieved temporarily by abdominal paracentesis.

Herpes Zoster.—This is an acute inflammation of the cutaneous branch of a sensory nerve most commonly affecting a dorsal nerve. The cause is presumed to be a virus which is closely connected with that causing chicken pox. The patient usually complains of malaise and possibly pyrexia which is followed in a few days by severe pain over the area of the nerve affected. The local site then becomes inflamed and vesicles appear along the course of the nerve, which remain for about a week, then drying and fading away. The treatment is rest for the patient and care of general health. Analgesics will be required to relieve the severe pain and dusting powder and protective dressing should be applied to the vesicles which should not be allowed to rupture. The patient may be treated as infectious. Unfortunately in some cases the pain continues indefinitely and may be extremely severe.

Uses and Methods of Administration of Mersalyl.—Mersalyl is a strong mercurial diuretic, increasing the urinary output by preventing the reabsorption of water in the tubules. It is very valuable in the cases of severe oedema due to heart disease and in those due to degenerative diseases of the kidneys. The drug is usually administered in fluid form by intramuscular injection or intravenously, being put up in ampoules of 1 or 2 c.c.; 1 c.c. may be given as a test dose, and if there are no ill effects such as haematuria, diarrhoea or skin irritation, this may be followed three days later by the full dose which later may be repeated once a week if necessary. If injections are contra-indicated the drug may be given as a suppository. To increase the diuretic action it is advisable to make the urine strongly acid by the administration of Ammonium Chloride, 30 grains, t.d.s., for three days over the period of the injection.

What the College is Doing

Points of Interest from the Council Meeting on November 15

THE Council met on Thursday, November 15, for a long session in which many matters of importance were discussed, and particular attention paid to the recruitment campaign launched by Mr. Aneurin Bevan that week, and supported by Press conferences, broadcast appeals, advertisement and literature.

The Council welcomed the fact that the Minister had attacked the problem of the shortage of nurses vigorously and had supported many points of policy which the Royal College of Nursing had advocated for many years. They were particularly gratified that the Minister had accepted the Rushcliffe Committee's proposals for a marked advance in the salary of the ward sister and staff nurse, which they had not been able to obtain when the scales were first drawn up in 1943. They were glad that he had asked for the setting up of Nurses' Representative Councils in all hospitals, and urged that these should be used for the settling of internal problems as far as possible: they had, in collaboration with the British Hospitals Association, drawn up a memorandum on the subject, which was available in pamphlet form (price 4d.) from headquarters.

Implementing the Code

The Council also consulted with members of the Student Nurses' Central Representative Council led by their chairman, Miss C. E. Bentley, with regard to the best ways in which the Royal College of Nursing and the Student Nurses' Association could combine to make the code operative and bring to the notice of their respective members the fact that the Royal College of Nursing, as a professional organization, was willing and anxious to assist in bringing the code of conditions into effect in the hospitals as early as possible. The members of both Councils agreed that wherever possible matters dealing with unsuitable conditions should first be brought to the notice of the Nurses' Representative Council within the hospital, and if satisfaction was not obtained from the authorities concerned, members should apply to the College or Association respectively to press for the full implementation of the code of conditions of service in so far as post-war conditions made it practical.

Two cases of professional difficulty came before the Council: in one, the student nurses had complained of their quarters, which were inadequately heated, and provided only one bath to thirty student nurses, with five night nurses sharing one attic: two officers of the College had investigated the report and found that the complaints were justified, so that the Council decided to forward the documents to the General Nursing Council. In another case, in view of a report made by an official of the College, the Council decided to question with the General Nursing Council the desirability of recognizing the hospital as a training school for nurses.

A Ward Sisters' Section

The Council considered a letter from Miss M. Scales, bringing to the notice of the Council a resolution passed at the conference of ward and departmental sisters held on October 13, 1945, asking that they should review the request that a Ward and Departmental Sisters' Section should be formed, as there were now 40 groups within the Branches. They agreed unanimously that the section should be formed as soon as possible, and set up a committee consisting of Dame Ellen Musson, Mrs. E. O. Jackson, Miss B. Monk, Miss M. Scales and Miss M. Wilmshurst to consider ways and means of putting this decision into effect. Miss H. Cook reminded the Council that the Brighton and Hove Group had offered in 1943 to raise £1,000 towards the starting of the section if Council wished, and that the offer was still open. The Council was very grateful for this very practical suggestion.

The Council discussed a proposal from a matron that they should make application for an extra allowance of milk for nurses, on account of the fact that they were exposed to infection in their work and were young women engaged on heavy work. The present allowance of five ounces per head per day was, Council felt, insufficient with the present rations to maintain their resistance to infection. The proposal received unanimous support from all members of Council, and the General Secretary was asked to approach the Ministers of Health and Food on this matter.

The Council considered a letter from Lady Radnor, Chairman of the Council, for the Provision of Rest Break Houses for Nurses and Midwives. Her Council reported that the Bedford Hotel, Buxton, would close at the end of December, 1945, but it had proved so valuable to the nursing and midwifery professions that they were anxious to continue similar 'houses,' but to enlarge their scope and provide also for post-convalescence and restful holidays. A further generous gift of about £17,500 had come from the British War Relief Society of the United States of America which was responsible for the scheme in the first place, but her Council would like to raise a total of £50,000 for the carrying out of their full project. They hoped to open two 'rest houses,' one on the south coast and one where spa treatment could be obtained, as at Buxton. The Council welcomed this proposal with great enthusiasm as nurses had found the Rest Break House invaluable during the war years, and suggested ways and means of giving concrete support to the new proposals.

The Professional Association Department reported that following the discussion in the House of Commons of the use of the title nurse by Christian Science workers, reported to the last Council meeting, representatives of the Royal College of Nursing had attended a meeting at the House with Members of the House of Commons and of the Church of Christ Scientist. No satisfactory conclusion had yet been reached, and the Council decided to ask the Minister of Health to receive a deputation of nurses to discuss the matter.

Inter-National Exchange

The Education Department reported many requests from nurses in Europe to come to this country for a period of six months' work in a British hospital. As this was not educational work but merely on an exchange basis, the Department felt that owing to the heavy educational programme they were now engaged upon, they could not readily undertake it to-day. The Council agreed that this was not strictly speaking educational work, though it was invaluable in establishing good international relations within the nursing profession, and beneficial to British nursing: they therefore undertook to explore means of continuing to carry out this work.

The Department also announced that five Indian students had arrived to take the Administrative and Sister Tutor's Courses at the Royal College of Nursing, Miss Bonjamin, Mrs. Cline, Miss Macasare, Miss Biswas, and Miss Chakko.

Examinations for students taking part-time industrial nursing courses in London and provincial centres had resulted in 54 out of 61 candidates gaining certificates, in spite of the difficulties of combining study with full-time employment.

The Advisory Board on Nursing Education had met on November 8, and had agreed to ask that candidates for the Sister Tutor Diploma of the University of London should have one internal and one external examiner. They had agreed that the fact that chemistry and physics, which the University of London had decided not to include in the examination, would become over-emphasized in the students' minds by the fact that the University had decided to demand from training institutions a statement that the candidates had reached a satisfactory standard in these subjects. The Board was of the opinion that this was detrimental to the students.

Pre-Nursing Syllabus

The Board had also discussed the pre-nursing course syllabus and expressed anxiety that the general education should not be too curtailed by the devoting of too much time to the professional subjects, anatomy, physiology and hygiene. The Council supported this view very emphatically.

The Sister Tutor Section asked that the following names be included in the Roll of Qualified Sister Tutors: Miss Kathleen Bessie Drage and Miss Annie Ingham.

The Public Health Section asked the Council to accept a statement drawn up by their members, concerning the care of children deprived of normal home life, with a view to its submission to the Curtis Committee which is considering this

Towards the Thirty Thousand

—Recruitment at Leicester

SCHOOLGIRLS, eager and interested, student nurses, talkative and happy, qualified nurses, proud and satisfied—even outsiders, such as mothers, teachers and friends—enjoyed Leicester's nursing recruitment day to the full. It fell, as Mr. L. W. Kershaw, O.B.E., Principal of the College of Technology, said in Shakespearian language, at the afternoon meeting like " the swelling act of the imperial theme," for it followed the Minister of Health's announcements on the staffing of hospitals and occurred the very day after his broadcast on the need for 30,000 more nurses. This, however, was not the reason for its success. Nor was it even the fact that the speakers, Lady Radnor, a vice-president of the Royal College of Nursing, Miss E. E. P. MacManus, O.B.E., former president, Miss M. F. Hughes, present president, and student nurses were of the first rank.

The real underlying cause was that in Leicester every day is a recruitment day. Miss Hughes and her tutors have for many years had contacts with the young people of Leicester and the surrounding country. They speak regularly at the secondary and other schools on nursing matters, they are always glad to show school children round the hospital. It was, therefore, a highly intelligent audience of 400 to 500 girls who, in the afternoon, filled the large hall in the College of Technology to hear the addresses and see the film ' The Student Nurse ' and, as Dr. E. K. Macdonald, medical officer of health, said, it was an inspiring sight to see so many potential nurses. Lady Radnor gave them an outside view of nurses and the value of their technical and advisory work; Miss Crittall, a nursery-nurse student, Miss E. Fennell, R.S.C.N., and student nurse of the Leicester Royal Infirmary, and Miss R. Mills, student nurse of the City General Hospital, spoke exceedingly well of their experiences and each held their audience.

X-Raying the Satchel

Miss Blackwell, superintendent, Leicester County Nursing Association, brought a note of fun in her descriptions of the district nurse's various means of transport—car or sledge, horse or camel! Lady Radnor suggested that those who wanted to use the talents God had given them could find no way which would serve mankind better than nursing. The community, she said, would be the richer according to the number of people who, whether they decided after training to do industrial, hospital or district nursing or to marry and manage a household and family, had the tremendously good influence of the nurse. Many of the audience must have looked at themselves almost as searchingly as during the visit to the hospitals in the morning the X-rays at the City General Hospital had revealed the contents of some of the satchels, to see if they could be both the skilled technician and this wise, kindly, good person she described.

Those who heard the short addresses, in the evening, which led to discussions on such subjects as the age of commencement of training, the question of an increase in the allowances for nurses in training, held definite views. One put forward a suggestion that matrons should interview prospective student nurses at an earlier age than 17½; they would then know whether to apply elsewhere or to consider taking up some other profession. A group of girls attending a pre-nursing course said afterwards, in spite of Mr. R. W. Ramsay's forceful words for increased salaries for student nurses, that they thought it more important to accentuate the student status but desirable, perhaps, to have grants for buying text-books and travelling home.

Miss E. E. P. MacManus came to Leicester to speak at the evening session : in contrast to Lady Radnor, who on each occasion when she spoke, made nurses feel a glowing pride in their profession and their College, she filled her listeners' minds with thoughts of the future, of the importance of all types of hospital staff and the need for the nurse to be a woman of experience and with wide interests.

Both speakers, Lady Radnor for the sake of the nurse herself, and Miss MacManus, for the sake of the patient, wanted the nurse to begin her training after she had had some experience of being grown up. Yet Miss MacManus made her audience feel that the profession was well worth striving or waiting for. " What is the field of the nursing profession ? " she asked. " It is the whole world—indoors and out."

A STUDY DAY FOR FIRST-YEAR NURSES

into the " blocks " and each set is divided into two. Hence there is an A1 and an A2, a B1 and a B2, a C1 and a C2 set every year. Each set attends a " block " from 10.30 a.m. to 4 p.m., after which the nurses are off duty and have the following day off. The blocks are arranged so that the two senior sets of nurses are never away from the wards on the same days.

The time table for each nurse during her block day is as follows :—

7.30 a.m. to 10.15 a.m., work in the wards.
10.15 a.m., lunch.
10.45 a.m. to 1 p.m., classroom.
1 p.m. to 2 p.m., dinner hour.
2 p.m. to 4 p.m., classroom.
4 p.m., off duty and a day off the following day.

Lectures and demonstrations are arranged so that the student may study the various angles of each subject at the same time.

The lecture list each week is arranged on the following lines for Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, and the three other days, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday, provide duplicate lectures to prevent too many nurses being taken from the wards on any one day.

Monday	Tuesday	Thursday
Testing of urine demonstration.	Demonstration of administration of enemata.	Lecture on respiratory diseases.
Nurses to their own wards to test urine.	Study time.	Demonstration of empyema, drainage and of the use of a B.L.B. mask.
Demonstration of catheterization.	Lecture on apparatus suitable for various types of enemata.	Short talk on tuberculosis.
Study time.	X-ray.	Visit to a sanatorium

Written work is given after some of the lectures : for instance, after the demonstration " Testing of Urine," the student nurses are asked to "carry out four tests in your ward: describe your method in detail."

The senior radiographer gives four lectures on the preparation of patients for diagnostic X-ray examination ; she illustrates them with films showing normal and abnormal findings and the effects of inadequate preparation. The nurses also see all over the department and its various types of apparatus. The hospital adjoins a sanatorium and the nurses are conducted round it, afterwards asking questions.

BACK FROM CHINA

"TO get to Honan University, which had evacuated to Lanchow in north-west China, I travelled over seven mountains and through seven sandy-floored valleys on a horse which, though it went up a mountain at n incredible speed, would not carry any weight down-hill", said Miss Winifred Galbraith to representatives of the Press recently, at the Young Women's Christian Association Central Club, W.C.1.

Miss Galbraith, Secretary of the Y.W.C.A. in China, has just returned to this country after four years of relief and educational work among Chinese University students and young people. The work is financed by the United China Relief and Aid to China Funds, and also by gifts from British and American university students. Her aim was to visit the university students who had fled, some of them as many as seven times, before the occupying Japanese forces, and set up a Y.W.C.A. hostel, or relief centre.

She told how, often, the students, ten per cent. of whom were women, were given only eight hours' notice to leave a village, and they had to decide which possessions to take with them and which to leave behind. Some took their Bibles, others warm clothing, and others notebooks. But at the end of the trek nearly all arrived with lighter burdens than at the beginning of the journey. Despite the fact that the Government detailed priority rice to the Universities, food was very scarce. The Y.W.C.A. and the Y.M.C.A. who work in joint co-operation, helped to provide milk made from soya beans; and padded coats which could be worn or used for bedding.

At the hostels some students were employed in cooking, carpentry and paper-making. Ten of the hostels had recreation rooms, reading rooms and barber's shops, but these were in the larger towns. Clinics are part of the mass education scheme and were set up in the large towns; classes being run in local health centres. The people of China suffered greatly from goitre and trachoma and some students from a medical college took over a clinic for refugees from the Y.W.C.A. and ran it in the back of a chapel, their surgery hours being 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. Miss Galbraith was born in London and educated at Westfield school and the University of London.

Coupon Concessions

Coupon concessions for members of the Civil Nursing Reserve were announced in a leaflet from the Ministry of Health in October. They are as follows :

(A) Whole-time members who have been in the Civil Nursing Reserve for one year or more and have surrendered at least one year's full contribution of coupons for the Civil Nursing Reserve uniform at the present rates will not be required to surrender any coupons for the year commencing September 1, 1945. If there has been a break in the service, coupons surrendered before and after the break may be added together for the purpose of determining whether a member is required to surrender any coupons for the current year.

(B) The special stocking coupon concession has been extended to the year 1945-46 and Civil Nursing Reserve members employed whole time in the eligible categories are entitled to the concession (see next para.). Three stocking certificates, each worth three coupons, should be issued during the year 1945-46 for each whole-time member who becomes eligible before March 1, 1946. Whole-time members who become eligible on or after that date should receive two certificates. Issues of stocking certificates to members should be recorded on the statement of clothing coupons surrendered.

(C) The following categories are eligible to receive stocking certificates provided they are included in the nurses uniform concession : nurses in hospitals, sanatoria, mental hospitals and institutions, and mental deficiency institutions; nurses in institutions, who are eligible for the nurses' uniform concession : including nurses in residential nurseries attached to a public assistance institution (where the staff is interchangeable); nurses in convalescent homes attached to a hospital, in maternity homes, nursing homes, and casualty evacuation trains; maternity, district, private and industrial nurses : State-certified and pupil midwives (domiciliary or in hospitals etcetera); matrons and nurses in school sanatoria and Government evacuation sick bays; nurses working full time in venereal disease clinics; nurses in certain nurseries which receive children before they are placed in evacuation nurseries, specified by the Board of Trade.

In Parliament

Recently in the House of Commons Lieutenant-Colonel Thorp asked the Minister of Health what opportunities were to be given to V.A.D.s to continue in the nursing profession.

Mr. Bevan said he assumed the honourable and gallant member had in mind those who had been serving as V.A.D.s with H.M. Forces. Such V.A.D.s could train for State-registration and might be eligible for a six months' remission of the period of training, or they could train for the Assistant Nurses Roll, if they were not already eligible for admission. He hoped to announce soon a scheme of special allowances for persons undertaking nursing training who had served in the Forces or done other work of national importance. V.A.D.s who satisfied the conditions would be eligible for such allowances.

Lieutenant-Colonel James Hutchison asked the Minister of Health whether he had now succeeded in fixing an alternative name than that of nurses for Christian Science attendants.

Mr. Bevan said he had not. The matter was still under consideration. He had discussed it with the interested parties and was now awaiting any representations they might wish to make to him after further talks which it was agreed they should have among themselves.

Mr. Piratin asked the Minister of Health whether he would now take steps to require local authorities to provide day nurseries for children under two, in each area, in place of or in continuation of the war-time day nurseries ; and what grants would be given to the local authority in respect of such day nurseries.

Mr. Bevan said that local needs varied widely and the appropriate method of caring for children under two—who were particularly susceptible to cross infection when congregated together—could best be judged by the responsible local authorities.

Brigadier Medlicott asked the Minister of Health if he was aware of the shortage of nurses at the Norfolk County Isolation Hospital ; and what steps he was taking to help the county council to meet the present difficult situation.

Mr. Bevan said his officers and those of the Ministry of Labour and National Service were doing their utmost to fill the vacancies at this hospital. In addition, permission was being given to the hospital authority to advertise, and the use, if necessary, of alternative accommodation was being considered.

OBITUARIES

Miss D. J. Brady

It is with deep regret that we record the death of Miss D. J. Brady, sister, Q.A.I.M.N.S. (R.), on October 4, 1945, in India. Miss Brady was trained at the Walthamstow Infectious Diseases Hospital and at the Princess Beatrice Hospital, London, S.W.5, remaining there as a staff nurse until joining the Q.A.I.M.N.S. (R.) in June, 1944. She served in North-West Europe from July, 1944, to March, 1945, and embarked for India in May.

Miss E. Mussett

We regret to announce the death of Miss Elsie Mussett at the Miller General Hospital on October 14. Miss Mussett was trained at the London Hospital and was ward sister there. She was matron of the Miller General Hospital from July, 1909, until her retirement in 1928, during which time the beds were increased from 30 to 151.

Miss E. Ravenscroft

Miss Elizabeth Ravenscroft, who had been sixteen and a half years at the Cottage Hospital, Axminster, S. Devon, as matron, died at the Hospital on October 3, after a short illness. Miss Ravenscroft who was 56 years old, was trained at North Bierley Infirmary, Clayton, Bradford, and was much loved by both patients and colleagues.

Correspondence

Australian Service

May I correct the caption of a picture on page 735 of the November 10 issue of your publication. It should read "members of the Australian Army Medical Women's Service." This service replaced the V.A.D. as enlisted women in the Australian Army, and their work is the exact counterpart of the other ranks of the Australian Army Medical Corps. They have their own administrative and welfare officers, and come under the direction of the Director General of Medical Service.

This service, known as the A.A.M.W.S., has an excellent record for the work achieved in this war, and an extensive programme is being carried out to train members who have been nursing orderlies, and who have a love of nursing, together with the necessary aptitude and educational qualifications. This course embraces 2 years' training in military hospitals, plus two years' women's and children's nursing in civilian hospitals. The whole training conforms to the Nurses Act in each stage of training, and the final examinations are conducted according to the State-Registration Board. This training has reciprocity in England.

In addition to nursing duties other members of the A.A.M.W.S. do clerical, pathological, laboratory, X-ray, laundry, driving and general duties. Members have served in Middle East and Pacific war theatres.

SUSAN J. HAINES,
(late Principal Matron Australian Army Nursing Service).

In Search of a Name

I would like to draw attention to recent articles in the Press on the nursing profession in which the authors speak of assistant nurses as "unqualified." Surely this is incorrect? Are not "enrolled" assistant nurses qualified nurses in their own grade? No "unqualified" women, with the exception of 'Christian Science' so-called nurses, are now permitted to use the title 'nurse.' The whole scheme for control and enrolment of assistant nurses by the General Nursing Council will be purposeless if they are to be referred to as "unqualified." The best type of girl, most suited to this category and so much needed to staff hospitals, will not come forward to receive the excellent two years' training, which will fit her for practical routine nursing, to be followed by examination, if she is to be called "unqualified."

Is not the title "assistant nurse" a misnomer? A medical officer has written deploring the term "assistant." In view of the "Roll" maintained by the General Nursing Council, assistant nurses who have been accepted should be termed "enrolled nurses," which is exactly what they are. It would be a simple, correct and acceptable title, quite distinct from State registered nurse. It should also be made plain to the public that there are qualified nurses who will do practical routine nursing, help to staff the hospitals and medical services and free State-registered nurses for the departmental posts for which they are in such great demand, and all the highly skilled work which cannot be carried out without their services. Every State-registered nurse should automatically have the title of "sister." The scheme to enrol assistants should not be jeopardized by failure to change this term to something acceptable to the type of girl so badly needed and who can do so much to ease the acute shortage of all nursing staff.

subject. The statement makes a number of recommendations, including some concerning the use of the health visitor in this work and the training of health visitors to fit them for the special problems involved in it. The Council agreed and congratulated the Section on the statement. The Public Health Section announced that a scholarship of £25 would be offered to a member for the health visitor's course. Two new sections with the Branches had been formed, making a total of 51.

The Branches Standing Committee reported that Miss L. G. Duff Grant had been elected Chairman for the year. The Council agreed to an application for a new Branch in Westmorland and received resolutions from the committee on the subjects of living out for trained members of the staff, which was favoured by 39 out of 48 branches expressing opinions, and on co-operation between nurses and midwives. The next quarterly meeting of the Branches Standing Committee would take place on Saturday, January 26, in London.

The Scottish Board reported that they had received a gift of £50 from the Border Counties Branch for a scholarship for a student wishing to take a post-certificate study course; they had accepted it with sincere appreciation.

The Board had supplied speakers to seven schools and three W.A.A.F. units during October. The Education Committee had discussed the development of pre-nursing courses and had agreed that such courses, and financial grants to pupils taking them, should be standardized throughout the country. The Board also stressed the need for the continuance of general education during the pre-nursing course and the undesirability of segregating girls taking such courses in special schools.

The Student Nurses' Association reported that the following members had consented to serve on the Central Representative Council to fill vacancies caused by members who had resigned on completion of their training:—London Area: County Council and County Borough Hospitals: Mrs. K. Bevan-White, St. Stephen's Hospital, Fulham, S.W.10; Midland Area: Voluntary Hospitals: Miss J. M. Smith, The Royal Infirmary, Leicester; Western Area: County Council and County Borough Hospitals: Miss M. J. Smith, Llandough Hospital, Penarth, Cardiff; Scottish Area: Special Hospitals: Miss J. M. Cook, The City Hospital, Edinburgh.

The Council accepted the award of ten bursaries, of £20 each, by the Association, to the following members: Miss D. Turner, Miss G. L. Harben, Miss G. E. Scholefield, Miss C. M. Thomas, Miss A. Bullock, Miss E. B. Fuller, Miss P. Lockwood, Miss E. M. Russell, Miss B. E. Thorburn, Miss I. W. C. Fimister. (See the Nursing Times, October 27, page 711.)

The Council agreed that a Christmas tree should stand in the entrance hall of the Royal College of Nursing from November 26 to receive gifts for the Nurses' Appeal Committee for distribution to sick and elderly nurses through the Nation's Fund for Nurses, and hoped that it would receive the same generous support that Branches and members gave to it last year and throughout the difficult war years.

Air-raid Victims' Grants

The Council sanctioned grants of £153 to air raid victims from the Nurses Air Raid Relief Fund for the month of October.

New Members

One hundred and fifty-three new members were enrolled and 410 new members of the Student Nurses' Association. This brings the total membership of the College to over 38,000 for the first time, and the Student Nurses' Association membership to about 15,000.

Date of next meeting: December 20, at 2.15 p.m.

PRIZES AND AWARDS

At the Kent and Canterbury Hospital Prizegiving, Miss E. E. P. MacManus, matron of Guy's Hospital, who presented the awards, with Miss Addison, matron, Miss Beynon, assistant matron, Miss Green, sister tutor and members of the staff

Kent and Canterbury Hospital

Miss E. E. P. McManus, matron of Guy's Hospital, London, who distributed the awards at the Kent and Canterbury Hospital prizegiving on October 26, told her hearers that there was no profession for women which held more varied opportunities than the nursing profession. In regard to the qualities needed by a successful nurse, Miss McManus said that technical excellence was not everything. Kindness and gentleness were valuable, but a nurse must be alert, aware and observant, while wisdom was the crowning glory.

Miss Addison, matron, in her report, said it was hoped that with the dawn of peace there would be a slackening of the pace of the work for all concerned with the hospital, but this had not been the case. More than ever before did they need to redouble their efforts if they were to overcome that very difficult period in the nursing and domestic worlds in order to maintain the very high standard for which the hospital was noted.

The following awards were made: Dr. Wacher's prize—Miss B. J. Poulter. Surgical nursing prize—Miss E. M. George. Medical nursing prize—Miss A. H. Bessant. Pharmacology—Miss P. L. Gray.

Dunfermline and West Fife Hospital

The annual re-union and presentation of prizes took place recently at Dunfermline and West Fife Hospital. Dr. J. Cairncross presided. He gave an interesting account of the year's work and congratulated those who had gained awards for post-graduate training. Dr. Cairncross asked Dr. Tuke to present the Tuke gold medal to Miss E. C. Fimister. This is the first year of this award and the medal is the replica of the hospital badge.

Mrs. R. W. McCrone then presented prizes to the following:—Excellence in practical nursing and general ward work—4th year—Miss E. C. Fimister; 3rd year—Misses D. Grieve and M. Dickson; 2nd year—Miss G. Wilson; 1st year—Miss M. McAirsh. Surgical nursing—Miss M. Stewart. Medical nursing—Miss M. Stewart. Anatomy and physiology—Miss I. Smith. Hygiene and dietetics—Miss H. Condie. Student nurse association prizes—Miss Souter and Miss McAirsh. Miss M. Bowie presented Mrs. McCrone with a book as a token of appreciation from the nursing staff. Mrs. George McNeill entertained the company with a delightful rendering of several songs. Dr. W. Adams proposed votes of thanks.

Keighley and District Victoria Hospital

The first annual prize distribution of the Dr. J. Nicholson Dobie memorial nurses' prize fund was held in the Nurses' Home of the Keighley and District Victoria Hospital, on September 24. The following awards were presented by Mr. J. Phillips, F.R.C.S.(E), honorary consulting surgeon to the Bradford Royal Infirmary. Gold medal and prize of £3 3s.—Miss A. Mitchell. Silver medal and prize of £1 1s.—Miss K. Ayrton. Senior nursing and theory and practice of nursing (book prizes)—Miss D. Ward. Medical nursing—Miss K. Ayrton. Surgical nursing—Miss C. M. Warren. Gynaecological, oto-rhino-laryngological and ophthamological nursing—Miss A. Mitchell.

Stobhill Hospital, Glasgow

On Wednesday, October 24, Stobhill Hospital, Glasgow, held its annual presentation of prizes in the Church Hall. The platform party included Sir Alexander and Lady Macgregor, Sir Alexander being the Medical Officer of Health for Glasgow, Miss Tulloch, matron, and Dr. A. D. Briggs, medical superintendent, who took the chair. Lady Macgregor presented the prizes after which Sir Alexander spoke on "The Future of the Nursing Profession." Tea was served in the Nurses' Home.

Prizes were awarded as follows:—Gold medal and Guthrie main medal—Miss B. Chisholm. (Miss Chisholm established a precedent by winning both medals.) Senior Nurses: Medical nursing—Miss E. D. Heron and Miss E. MacGillivray. Surgical nursing—Miss M. D. Graham and Miss J. M. Morrison. Gynaecological nursing—Miss B. Chisholm, Miss I. M. Thomson and Miss J. C. Capewell. Materia medica—Miss C. G. Watt, Miss M. Williamson and Miss J. M. Morrison. Theory and practice of nursing—Miss B. Chisholm, Miss I. Thomson and Miss M. C. Campbell. Dietetics—Miss J. R. Black and Miss B. Chisholm. Sick children's nursing—Miss V. Callomon. Junior Nurses: Anatomy and physiology—Miss I. H. Anderson and Miss J. M. Smith. Hygiene—Miss J. M. Smith and Mrs. E. Whelan. Theory and practice of nursing—Miss J. M. Smith and Miss C. W. Ross.

Southern General Hospital

The annual prizegiving of the Southern General Hospital was held on October 25, when the prizes were presented by Lady McGregor, wife of Sir Alexander McGregor, medical officer of health for Glasgow, who also attended and addressed the nurses.

The prizes were awarded as follows: First year nurses: Anatomy and Physiology—Miss Isobel Findlay and Miss Theresa Robinson. Hygiene and Dietetics—Miss Isobel Findlay and Miss Margaret Rankin. Practical nursing—Miss Isobel Findlay and Miss Margaret Rankin.

The John Laing Memorial Prize awarded to the best practical nurse among the juniors was divided equally between Miss M. Rankin and Miss I. Findlay.

Senior nurses: The Rose Ann Shepherd memorial prize awarded to the nurse with the highest marks in all her examinations during the three year lecture period—Miss Jane Crozier. Surgical nursing—Miss Helen Riddell and Miss Elizabeth Dunlop. Medical nursing—Miss Margaret Dickson and Miss Helen Riddell. Gynaecological nursing and Materia Medica—Miss Christina Lawrie, Miss Mary Bonner and Miss Patricia Conroy. Practical nursing and Dietetisc—Miss Mary Greig and Miss Sarah Chalmers.

The John Laing Memorial Prize awarded to the best practical nurse among the seniors was divided equally between Miss P. Conroy and Miss J. Park.

Medallists at Salford

At Hope Hospital, Salford, Miss V. I. Brookes and Miss W. O. Leeds were this year's gold and silver medallists.

Dame Katherine Watt at the Queen Elizabeth

A LARGE audience of parents and friends met in the Hall of Nuffield House for the fourth annual prizegiving of the Queen Elizabeth Hospital, Birmingham. Dame Elizabeth Cadbury, M.A., J.P., President of the Hospital, presented the prizes and certificates and introduced Dame Katherine Watt, C.B.E., R.R.C., Chief Nursing Officer, Ministry of Health. She said she knew what great help Dame Katherine could give them from her wide experience both abroad and in the British Isles. Speaking to the nurses, Dame Katherine said, "the end of your training marks for you the summit of a great road. But it is a happy road, because for those of you who have won through it opens into a large and interesting field of nursing work." She saw nurses as ships, setting out on a wide and sometimes dangerous sea. Her advice to them was, "do not drift.' "Very many of you," she continued, "will marry, and I am confident that as wives and mothers you will not regret the years of training you have had." Dame Katherine continued by outlining briefly the two main fields of nursing, curative and preventive. She hoped many would take up midwifery, "for there is nothing finer and more satisfying than bringing new life into the world." Referring to industrial nursing, she expressed the hope that the industrial nurse would have a great part to play in the health services of the future. She recommended also Colonial nursing, and mentioned the great demand for British-trained nurses in all colonies. In conclusion she said that a trained nurse could only be a really good nurse if she had courtesy, and that with both courtesy and courage the nurses of Queen Elizabeth's would be very fine indeed.

During tea in the sisters' common room, handsome autumn bouquets were presented to Dame Elizabeth Cadbury, Dame Katherine Watt and Matron, Miss C. A. Smaldon.

The prizes wese awarded as follows: Gold medal and prize—Miss S. N. Dunn. Silver medal and prize—Miss P. M. Rose. Medical nursing—Miss P. M. Rose. Surgical—Miss N. K. Marshall. Gynaecological nursing—Miss U. Mindelsohn. Ear, nose and throat prize—Miss S. N. Dunn. Ophthalmic prize—Miss M. R. Goode. Paediatrics prize—Miss B. N. Cull. Final year merit—Miss S. N. Dunn. Second year merit—Misses P. U. Tyrer, J. M. Whitehead, and M. Wood. First year examination and merit list—Miss A. F. Wall. Queen's League prize—Miss Birch, staff nurse. Phoebe Homewood prize—Miss P. Carroll. A number of certificates were presented.

Sister Tutor Section

Meeting in the North

A meeting for sister tutors in the Southern part of Yorkshire and the North-East Midlands will be held on Saturday, December 1 at 3 p.m., at the Grand Hotel Sheffield to discuss the formation of a Sister Tutor Section to cover this area. Miss L. G. Duff-Grant, R.R.C., will speak and Miss A. E. A. Squibbs, Diploma in Nursing, will preside. Tea, at 2s., will be at 4 p.m. Will those who can attend kindly let Miss L. E. Montgomery, Northern Area Organizer, 24 Chelmsford Road, Harrogate, know before Tuesday, November 27, stating if tea is required.

Branch Reports

Altrincham Branch.—On November 9, the Branch had a "Victory Party" with games, music, refreshments and talk. Miss Montgomery, the Northern Area Organizer, gave a short talk. She said the Government valued the advice and counsel of the Royal College of Nursing and, that being so, it was urgent that there should be College branches in all parts of the country. At present the Altrincham Branch was the only one in the county.

Birmingham and Three Counties Branch.—On Thursday, November 29, at 7 p.m., an open meeting will be held in the nurses' home, Children's Hospital, Birmingham (Francis Road entrance). Miss S. Haines, R.R.C., late principal matron in the Australian Army Nursing Service will speak on "The Work of UNRRA." On Saturday, December 1, from 4 p.m. to 7.30 p.m., at Nuffield House, Queen Elizabeth Hospital, Birmingham, 15, there will be a "bring and buy" sale (4 to 5 p.m.) Tea (1s.) and a Gramophone Recital (6 to 7.30 p.m.). There will be a silver collection in aid of the "Mrs. Harrison-Barrow Memorial Fund." Please bring your friends.

Burnley and District Branch.—On Monday, November 26, at 2.30 p.m., at the Victoria Hospital, Burnley, Miss M. Scales, ward sister, Guy's Hospital, member of the College Council, will speak to ward and departmental sisters on "Ward Management." On Tuesday, December 4, at 7 p.m., Dr. E. S. Dunn, M.B., Ch.B., will lecture at the Victoria Hospital Burnley, on "Anaesthetics, including Pre-Medication."

Derby Branch.—The study day held on November 3 was well supported. In the morning, Mr. J. R. Ratcliffe, F.R.C.S., gave a talk on "Rehabilitation" and stressed the importance of the psychological, economic and social aspect of the illness on the recovery of the patient. An interesting sound film on the subject was also shown. The demonstration in the physiotherapy department arranged by Miss Morris, C.S.P., illustrated the importance of co-operation between medical, nursing and physiotherapy personnel. Mr. L. O. Watt, F.R.C.S., M.R.C.O.G., gave a lecture on "Sterility and Abnormal Conditions of the Reproductive Tract." His approach to the subject was stimulating. The effect of sterility on social problems and domestic happiness was scientifically explained.

The evening lecture by Dr. D. V. Hubble, M.D., on "Preventive Medicine in Paediatrics" was of special interest to public health nurses.

Guildford Branch.—A "bring and buy" sale will be held on December 4, at 2.30 p.m., at the Royal Surrey County Hospital; proceeds are in aid of the Elderly Nurses Fund. There will also be a lecture entitled "The Joy of Living" by Dr. Melhuish, at 3 p.m. All nurses and friends are invited to come.

Inverness Branch.—On November 10, in Melvin's Tea Room, a talk was given by Miss Warnock, B.Sc., dietitian to the Ministry of Food in Scotland. On November 14, at 8 p.m., Dr. Dick gave a talk on "Penicillin," in The Royal Northern Infirmary.

Liverpool Branch.—It is proposed to form a Ward and Departmental Sisters' Group within the Liverpool Branch, and a meeting to discuss this project will be held on Thursday, November 29th, at 7 p.m., at Liverpool Royal Infirmary. All ward and departmental sisters are invited.

Nottingham Branch.—The Branch "Victory Party" will be held on Saturday, December 8, at 3 p.m., in Pearson House General Hospital. Members may bring a friend. Tickets 1s. 6d. Please apply to the honorary secretary.

Redhill Branch.—A general meeting will be held on Wednesday, November 28, at 8.30 p.m., at the Redhill County Hospital.

Shrewsbury Branch.—A "bring and buy" sale and whist drive was held on November 8, as the result of which the sum of £22 was sent to Headquarters for relief abroad. A visit to the Salop Mental Hospital has been arranged for Thursday, December 6, at 3 p.m.

Torquay and District Branch.—There will be a meeting on Monday, November 20, at 3.30 p.m., at the Teignmouth Hospital. Dr. Tippett will give a talk. Will all nurses who have changed their address or who have left the Torquay district, please notify the Secretary, Mrs. Bladon, Lugano Courtenay Place, Teignmouth, S. Devon, so that the register may be correct and save postage.

Winchester Branch.—A meeting will be held on Wednesday, December 5, at 2.30 p.m., at the Royal Hants County Hospital, Winchester, in the Nightingale Nurses' Home.

NURSES' APPEAL FOR NURSES

Nation's Fund for Nurses

We are grateful to the nine individual donors who have given us support this week, as without their thoughtful help we would be feeling very anxious at a fall in our total just when the winter is beginning to make us shiver. One can put up with a shiver now and again, but when it is continuous with no prospect of a warm fire or cosy blankets to alleviate it, then it becomes a real misery. That is what we want to prevent amongst our old and ailing nurses and every penny you can send will help in this most necessary work.

ROYAL VICTORIA INFIRMARY
NEWCASTLE UPON TYNE
APPOINTMENT OF MATRON
The House Committee of the Royal Victoria Infirmary wish to proceed with the appointment of a Matron to succeed Miss Charteris who is retiring at an early date.
The Infirmary is a General Hospital with Special Departments and a recognised training school for nurses. It is the teaching Hospital for the University of Durham. The Infirmary has a present total of 810 beds.
The House Committee desire that this appointment should offer new opportunities to someone who is anxious to advance nursing practice and nursing education, and for these purposes have arranged to relieve the Matron of all duties within the Hospital other than those directly related to nursing. She will be provided with adequate technical, educational and secretarial staff. She will be encouraged to study in practice and by enquiry the nursing needs of the patient on the one hand and the needs of the nurses on the other, so that new methods and standards of nursing may be kept constantly in mind throughout the Hospital. She will be given the opportunity of travel and of using all other means of keeping abreast of modern advances in nursing and of educational methods in other fields.
The House Committee will welcome applications for this appointment from as wide a field as possible, including those who have not had recent nursing experience and from those with medical and other academic qualifications, and every opportunity will be given for applications from those who are at present in H.M. Forces.
Terms and conditions of the appointment will be discussed at interview.
Form of application, together with more detailed particulars of terms and conditions of appointment, may be had on application to the undersigned.

REASSURING THE PATIENT.

How often do nervous patients delay in seeking medical advice. This is particularly true in the case of haemorrhoids. When, therefore, the examination discloses simply a condition of incipient haemorrhoids the patient's feeling of relief is great.

Fortunately, it is often possible to reassure the patient that if the condition has not progressed too far it may be relieved by rectal medication. Such medication is admirably met in Anusol Suppositories.

By emollient properties alone, Anusol Suppositories aid in alleviating pain, reducing inflammation and congestion, and controlling bleeding.

Neutralize Excessive Acidity and End.

INDIGESTION

One of the minor, but distressing accompaniments to convalescence and pregnancy is some form of indigestion. The unfailing neutralizing qualities of 'Milk of Magnesia' in all cases of excessive acidity of the stomach end embarrassing eructation, relieve heartburn and re-establish normal assimilation. A convenient form of this widely recognised remedy is supplied in 'Milk of Magnesia' Tablets — mint flavoured and palatable. Each tablet is equal to one teaspoonful of the liquid.
